Re: Western Sugar Cooperative, et al. v. Archer-Daniels-Midland Company, et al.
Schedule for Corn Processors' Document Production and Case Schedule

Counsel:

We write to follow up on our prior meet and confer correspondence and discussions regarding the "Confidential" and "Highly Confidential — Attorneys' Eyes Only" designation of documents produced by the CRA and documents produced in response to plaintiffs' subpoenas to James Rippe ("Rippe"), John White and the White Technical Research Group (collectively, "White").

During our meet and confer discussion about the CRA document production on September 12, 2013, we agreed to examine a subset of CRA documents to provide specific details in connection with the over-designation issue. To that end, we have analyzed 100 randomly selected documents from the CRA production. Of the 100 randomly sampled documents, 27 were designated AEO and 66 were designated Confidential. The results of that analysis, set forth in the enclosed chart, reflect the rampant over-designation of CRA's production.

Most disturbing is the over-use of the AEO designation. As we previously wrote, Section 2.4 of the parties' Stipulated Protective Order limits AEO designations to competitively sensitive information, where "disclosure of such document would pose a serious risk of competitive harm." Virtually none of the AEO documents we examined from CRA's production meets those criteria. In addition, most of the documents designated as Confidential are improperly designated as such. For example, CRA0209304, designated as Confidential, reflects a public comment on the FDA Corn Sugar petition. CRA0487213, a photo of Dr. Rippe, is designated as AEO. CRA0541222, a blank page, is designated as Confidential.

As agreed during our meet and confer, we ask that you now perform your own analysis on a different portion of the CRA production, and that you provide us with your assessment of the confidentiality designations for those documents. We ask that you provide it to us no later than ten days from now so that corrective processes can be applied before completion of defendants' document production: our preliminary review of the newly produced documents from Cargill and Tate & Lyle suggest that the same over-designation infecting CRA's production and the Rippe and White productions¹ has infected the Corn Processor Defendants' productions, too.

In candor, the extent of defendants' over-designation of discovery materials strongly suggests that it is motivated by the unsavory optics of defendants' business records, not by legitimate concerns about competitive harm. We trust that your own analysis will result in your consequent commitment to remedy defendants' abuse of the Stipulated Protective Order promptly.

Sincerely,

David S. Elkins

¹ With respect to the Rippe and White productions, on August 22, 2013 we sent you a list of over 300 documents which we challenged due to their AEO designations. Your August 29, 2013 response indicated that you were in agreement that all but one of the documents had been improperly designated, and the AEO designations will be withdrawn. Since then, we have identified numerous additional documents in those productions that are improperly designated as AEO or Confidential. Examples of these additionally inappropriately designated documents include RIPPE 2547 – an email string discussing dinner plans; RIPPE 2672 – correspondence concerning room bookings for a conference; WHITE 8230 – correspondence discussing John White's inability to open an attachment emailed to him by Audrae Erickson; and WHITE 10280 – correspondence discussing whether John White could book his travel plan over four years ago. These examples demonstrate that the overuse of AEO designations is particularly egregious and must be remedied. We have prepared and now attach a list of the additional Rippe and White documents that we are challenging.
